

B. D. EAKER, who has been editing the Morehouse Hustler a little more than a year, has sold the plant to a Mr. Chas. E. Cook of Indianapolis, Ind. In glancing through the Congressional Record the following tribute to President Wilson from Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts, a republican leader in the lower house of congress, and who has served in that body continuously since 1892. Mr. Gillett said, "I have the greatest admiration for the occupant of the white house. I think his conduct has been absolutely above all criticism and our nation is to be congratulated that he is there and that he is our spokesman in the state papers which he has issued. It seems to me that as the man who is voicing the opinion of the United States, the man who is spokesman for the whole people and who is placing our case before the world, he has been as high perfect as could be hoped for from humanity."

I am glad to see so many buying War Savings Stamps. In doing so you are helping win the war. Let us remember that in every age, in every great reform of world-wide proportions, in every readjustment of social and religious standards from the birth of liberty to the world atonement for sin through the death and passion of Jesus Christ, victory has been bought with blood. Our boys are marching, marching to victory by way of the chamber of horrors—war. The bravest and truest men the sun ever shone upon are giving themselves a living sacrifice in order to perpetuate Christian civilization and religious freedom which has been handed down to us by our forefathers through a veil of tears and a deluge of blood. There must be no slackers. We must all do our part and then we will see the triumphant march of the triune army of Right—England, France and America—win the victory. Then will the heavenly choir join in with the chorus of the peoples of the earth singing, "Glory to God in the highest, peace, universal peace, on earth."

With best wishes to the soldier boys, I will ring off.

Obituary

Quietly and, it seemed, painlessly the angel of death hovered over the home of dear old Mr. Warren and removed to the bright beyond the kind and faithful husband, the loving father.

His life had been one of unusual length and he had been full of activity and ambition until age had enfeebled him. However, his mind remained clear and his conversation intelligent.

Those who knew him best realized that with him the great question of salvation was settled many years ago.

Just a short time before his release he tried to say something to his companion who was near him, but he could only point upward and say, "The Savior."

While the bereaved widow and children deeply realize their loss, they feel that with "Father Warren" all is well.

Gone is the faithful husband, Gone is the father dear; Tho' sadly they will miss him, For him they have no fear.

Because of words he uttered, As he pointed to realms on high; "It is not all of life to live Nor all of death to die."

in the Chevrolet explodes its gasoline in the piston chamber—and explodes it completely. It develops all the gas power in the fuel as to hold burned gases that there are no pockets to weaken the mixture.

In this motor, the explosion occurs right over the piston head—and all the power drives straight against the piston. None is lost in turning a corner from a separate explosion chamber.

The Valve-in-head motor is used by the Government on airplanes and wherever unusual power and reliability are demanded.

In Memoriam

Sacred to the memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Cerilda Berryman, who departed this life one year ago today, March 24, 1917, and to our dear father, Robert Berryman, who entered into life eternal November 9, 1917.

A shadow fell upon our lives When Death, the reaper, came, And took our mother dear away From earthly care and pain.

Then soon again the reaper came, This time our father dear he claimed; Without a murmur, without a tear, He passed to be with mother dear.

United in a better world, Though sad today are we; But some sweet day we'll meet them there, To dwell eternally.

Sadly missed by their son and daughter,
EDWARD BERRYMAN,
MRS. FRED SADLER
